THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD.

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1863.

Those who recall, and those who anticipate the joy of the day when the vows of true love found, or are to find their realisation, will find with lively pleasure the account of the wedding of the PRINCE and PRINCESS OF WALES. They have now entered upon a grand stage in the journey of life, and if their rank does not place them above the satisfactions of home, it is not less true that they can only find them in those homely virtues which are necessary to the happiness of the lowly. The princely state to which they are born has enabled them to surround this event with greater éclat than others.

But experience has too often proved that the marriage of princes is a new danger and misery. The bride, delivered up by the policy of kings to the unwilling arms of a stranger, has felt the pang of a mockery of woe. She has felt herself as a sacrifice laid upon the altar of ambition, of pride, and of policy. Not less miserable often has been the prince destined to an equal sacrifice—to break away from preferred relations, and, bowing to the necessity supposed or real of the State, to enter into a detested contract, to consign a worldly bargain.

It was impossible for many to forget the miserable lives of the last PRINCE and PRINCESS OF WALES, or not to feel the happy contrast presented by the bright, contented, and consenting countenances of the wedded pair; or without thinking of the superior happiness they enjoyed. The facility of intercourse between Courts enabled the PRINCE to visit, without formality, the Royal families of Europe, and it seems that this marriage has been brought about with the ordinary auspices of domestic bliss.

The young people met, their intercourse led to a mutual preference, and, being consistent with their rank and duties, it has been crowned by the approbation of their country, and has conciliated the warmest wishes of nations. That it may yield all the felicity which the conjugal relationship is capable of expanding in all the relations of home—in short, that it may be a reproduction of that bright picture of family life which the household of the QUEEN has for so many years presented, must be the desire of all.

The festivities of England on such an occasion, costly as they have been, have expressed the general satisfaction, and enabled the whole people to participate with the QUEEN in the delight which she has felt in the settlement of her son. He has entered on life with a splendid fortune, which must hourly remind him of his filial obligations. It was to a father's care he owed this large and noble provision for his unwelcome wife. The last PRINCE OF WALES accepted as his wife a woman whom he hated and persecuted to death—that he might entitle himself to a grant from Parliament for the payment of his debts! He was extravagant and poor; he became at last reckless and cruel. Many tears were shed for his unfortunate and forsaken wife, mingled with the regret that he was not wholly unmerited. He was the "first gentleman" of Europe, but when he died the nation breathed more freely, and was glad he was gone. One cannot, however, forbear to ask whether he might not have shown a different character had his education been like that of his successor, and had he found that one woman among a thousand those who look among a thousand for one never find.

The bright anticipation of the nation has every reason in its favour. The new PRINCESS is commended by the voice of fame as accomplished and good. Her beauty will release her from the temptations to envy, her rank will place her beyond social competition. The postponement of her eventual royalty, will enable her to fill with more success a not less important task—as mother of "our Kings to be."

No one could look upon the ceremony without thinking of that happiness which the hand of death destroyed some eighteen months ago. Every body must have thought of the QUEEN, and have entered into her private grief as she retired from the gaze of her people—upon that stroke which deprived her of her guide, her counsellor, and most beloved friend, and clothed her in the weeds of widow amidst the scenes of magnificence and joy which surrounded her eldest son and his young bride. But a little while ago it was ALBERT and VICTORIA, who, sinking all distinctions of their rank, pledged their faith as man and woman. It was ALBERT EDWARD on this occasion gave, with equal simplicity, the pledge of his love to ALEXANDRA. It is in these rites that the level of humanity is beautifully recognised, and that those who are born to the highest station confess that they have entered upon the hopes, the cares, the straits, and the agonies which are incident to this mortal state.

We are sure our readers join us in the warmest wishes for the happiness of the married pair. Should the PRINCE reach the full term of human life, his own character and that of his household will affect the welfare of the nation, and not be indifferent to the monarchy itself. We believe that the personal character of the reigning family is of increasing importance; and as the prejudice and superstition of royalty are weakened, it is necessary that a perception of their worth should attach the people to their hereditary Princes. The philosopher prefers monarchy because it gives stability to all other institutions, and its elevation places the supreme power beyond the agitation of fustian passions and temporary factions; but in an age when whatever royalty does is transmitted to the four quarters of the earth upon the wings of lightning, it is necessary that rank should be set off by the gentle attachment of domestic virtue. So long as the PRINCE shall follow in the footsteps of his father, and the PRINCESS shall display the qualities of the QUEEN, the Royal Family of England the envy of all reigning houses and of the world.

There is nothing decisive in the news from America. Precious time is passing away, and that at a season of the year, and at a political juncture when every day is of importance. The people impatiently waiting for grand successes, are put off by accounts of grand preparations. Meanwhile, every delay, though exhausting to both sides, is more damaging to the Federals than to the Confederates. It is an admission on the part of the former that the task they have on hand is very formidable indeed, and it makes it still more so in fact by giving the Confederates time to increase their defensive preparations.

The news from California spoke of a renewed bombardment of Vicksburg. But as nothing of this is mentioned in our telegram, it must have been an incorrect report. It referred, perhaps, to some attempt on Fort Hudson lower down the river. The Confederates still hold the Mississippi between these two points, and have managed to strengthen themselves on the water by the capture of the Federal gunboat Indiana. They have also their own rank the Queen of the West. It is said that these two vessels may be dispatched down the river to New Orleans, but this must rather represent the easily-awakened fears of the North than the intentions of the South, for the Federal fleet is too strong in the South Mississippi to fear anything from the attack of two vessels. And, moreover, it would need the co-operation of a strong land force to recapture New Orleans. General Banks when he went down there to assume the command, having taken with him a very strong reinforcement.

The Confederates would seem to feel secure in the South-west, for VAN DORN, who has been for a long time manoeuvring about in that locality, has been sent northward to strengthen Bragg. We hear that he has crossed the Tennessee River at Florence, a town about forty miles eastward of the stronghold of Corinth. From that point he probably took the direct road to Nashville, as we hear of him fighting a Federal general south of Franklin, which is on that line of route. He appears to have gained a very complete victory, having probably a great superiority in point of numbers. The engagement was not of a magnitude to determine the fate of a campaign, but as threatening Nashville and Rosecrans' communications with that place, which is his base of operations, the affair was important. It would seem from this action that VAN DORN was not sent to join his forces to those of BRAGG, but to operate on the flank and rear of the Federal line of communications, and to hinder Rosecrans from following up the victory he gained at Murfreesboro.

The Federals have had some compensation in a victory gained in East Kentucky, where the retreating Confederates were overtaken, and two hundred prisoners. On the other hand, again, two hundred Union cavalry were captured at Strasburg. In the course of a civil war spreading over an enormous territory, these isolated actions will occur with varying fortunes, the issue being mainly dependent on the accidental superiority of numbers, or the skill and daring of the particular officer in command. They have little influence on determining the course of the war.

The Nashville, that so long braved the Federal flag, has at last been destroyed. For some time past it has been very closely blockaded, and it has been waiting a chance to run out. The attempt failed, and, getting ashore near Fort Maclester, it was soon knocked to pieces by the Federal ironclads, which were in the neighbourhood. Its early capture, the Sumter, long lay idle at Gibraltar, where it was sold. Neither of these vessels were ships of war, though they inflicted great damage on Federal commerce. They were simply passenger steamers, fitted up hastily for naval service. They are now harmless; but they have been succeeded by the Alabama and the Florida, two much more formidable craft, and both of which appear to continue their career with impunity. The Federal fleet is evidently hard pressed to look after these cruisers, and yet maintain the blockade efficiently, for four vessels are reported as having run the blockade of Charleston with impunity. By the latest intelligence we hear that a fresh attack had been commenced in Texas for the recovery of the port of Galveston, the Confederates recently regained. The issue of the enterprise is not mentioned, but as the Federals could draw from the Texas and the Gulf squadron a strong naval force, it is most probable that the attack would prove successful.

Nothing can exceed the energy and determination with which the Congress at Washington supports the PRINCE's war policy. Any quantity of men, and any quantity of money that he asks for is readily granted. In fact, more than he asks for is pressed upon him. A loan, which for its magnitude dwarfs all war loans which have ever been sanctioned, and which in itself is double the whole expenditure of Great Britain in the Crimean war, has been conceded readily. A Conscription Bill, too, embracing all citizens from twenty to forty years of age, and from which not even ministers of religion are exempted, has been also authorised to issue letters of marque as a preparative to foreign war, and a proposal to limit the duration of the civil war was negatived.

All this looks like war to the knife; but to understand the meaning of it thoroughly, it is necessary to remember the peculiar political crisis to which American affairs are hastening. The Congress which votes thus freely, contains a large republican majority. The elections, however, have altered the supremacy of this party. When the next session opens, the new men will take their seats, and there will be a democratic majority. The present holders of legislative power are doing all in their power, therefore, to urge on military preparations and vigorous measures. Fearing that their successors, more disposed to peace and compromise, should stint the supplies, and so fetter the PRINCE's hands, they are pressing upon him all that he can possibly want, and even more than he can make a good use of for the present. They will not give the democrats the chance of embarrassing the PRINCE by cutting off the supplies. Never before was so enormous a war power placed at one time at the disposal of one man as has been placed in the hands of the PRINCE of Wales.

Thus far we have dealt with the aggregate of both sexes. The comparative position of males and females at the late census was found to be as under:

It would thus appear that during the first interval (1846 to 1851) the educational position of our youth had rather retrograded, the number of males who could read and write having receded from 722 to 712; but that during each of the two subsequent intervals it rapidly improved, the proportional number who could read and write advancing from 712 per mille to 748, and then from 748 to 785. Of each thousand persons in the colony at the late census belonging to this period of life, not under 14 years old nor above 21, there were 107 who could not read, 108 who could read but not write, and 785 who could both read and write.

Having noticed the educational condition of the adult and the youthful parts of the population, we have now to inquire into that of the children, comprising all the boys and girls under 14 or 15 years of age.

copy Crown lands (I am sorry to say to too much of the life) as deeply implicated in the crime of the slave. They have been repeatedly heard to say openly that they were well acquainted with Gadisier; that he was frequently at their stations, but that they did not think it wise policy on their part to inform on him. These men, who are the most numerous and powerful of the race, and saviour to them of the convictocracy of the colony, but, if they patiently listen to an explanation, they will not, perhaps, hastily condemn our squatters adopting a course which they are constrained to pursue.

The public Press, as in duty bound, has exposed the lawless state of the colony, and earnestly endeavoured to yoke down crime; and the inhabitants of the metropolis have been loud in their clamours about the life of the colony. But the squatters have suffered so much from this lawless state of affairs that the squatters settle themselves. Living out in the wild bush, miles apart from one another, are left an easy prey to the hungry depredator.

If they set their faces against the latter—drive him from their doors, or surprise him in his den, and hand him over to justice, they will receive in return the praise of the people, and a few hundreds of pounds sent from Government; but on the other hand, will be in continual fear for their lives from the assaults of his accomplices still at large. The squatter who has turned informer, will not be permitted to receive the reward offered for his capture, and, if he is obliged to visit the nearest township, he knows not that on his return he will find his comrades consumed, or perhaps one of his family members dead. No man, therefore, who is in Government can bestow, nor the consciousness of having one duty, as a British subject, will be sufficient to expiate for a life of his wife or child. Of two men, one of whom is a murderer, the latter will be the frequent visits of the bushrangers, and makes indefinite replies to the enquiries of officials or amateur troopers. Police protection for this class of people is a mere mockery. The Government is so organised at present as to be of comparatively little assistance to men who, perhaps, would otherwise be perfectly willing to lend every assistance in their power to the Government. A number of troopers, green from Sydney, and new to the bush, are sent to the bush, and, on quitting a beaten track, immediately get bewildered in the bush, mindful of their own safety, and unable to do more than keep a wary eye on the men who are laughing in the bush at their formidable guardians of the public highway, await their disappearance behind a hill and then seize on some wayward party, and murder him. The Government has not enough money to satisfy their demands, ill-rent him or the unfortunate deficiency. Information is now lodged with the police; the troopers scour the bush, and the bushmen find it difficult to escape.

The effrontery and impurity with which these outlaws have so lately attacked the sons of Mars, Mr. Reynolds and Croaker, as well as Mr. Conan's store, Moore's, and the way in which they have treated the police, are on our occasion the officials are three or three on hand behind the robbers when one of the places as stuck up; yet search was useless. A few have been arrested, but the Government has no money to pay on account of their own inactivity, thus, making the Government officials. A numerous gang is still left to harass the country. Very probably, if a settler in the western district were to be murdered, the bushrangers, the people of Sydney would sympathise with him; he, latter, and draw up a numerously signed petition in favour of the murderer, to have him acquitted or released, and the Government would give him the opportunity of returning to his old home and wreak his ance on those he considers his enemies. It is entirely the unity of the squatters and settlers to give one and the other a screen, nor have any of these ruffians who now annoy the country; but, with a population so scattered, and so widely differing in principles and character, some one is sure to break forth as a disturber of the peace. However, the expulsion of these small settlers will not remedy the evil, which a course would be dealing out vengeance alike on the righteous and the wicked. More efficient protection must be afforded to the settlers, and to him to set straightforwardly at the criminal moment. The machinery of the police force must be put in better order. Some of the wheels must be oiled badly, and the engine must be kept in better order. The circles which seriously retard the active movements of the working members of the force, and gives them no encouragement to exert themselves in capturing men, whose daring deeds their superiors are sure to laugh at.

Peshaw, Mr. Editor, in your investigations you will find many sins out where this impudent exile; and doubtless it runs rampant in the higher circles existing in this district than the election of all the Pockettos settlers in the colony.

I am, Sir, yours truly,
W. S. M.

IMPORTANT TO STOCK FARMERS.—By Royal Letters Patent, M. O'NEILL'S NON-POISONOUS SHERR and LAMB DIPPING COMPOSITION, for the prevention and cure of scab in sheep. The composition generally used for sheep-dipping contains arsenic and strong alkalies, which frequently cause the most disastrous accidents, and constantly act detrimentally on the flock. The arsenic and mercury they contain are a continual source of danger, both to the animals and the persons who apply the poisonous composition. Rancious losses are incurred when the sheep do not happen to be in a condition to resist the action of the poison, or the operator sufficiently skilful in taking the necessary precautions. In some recent cases hundreds of valuable sheep have died within a few days after having been dipped in these poisonous baths. The strong alkali by which the arsenic is rendered soluble is also a very objectionable application; it causes the wool and destroys the oleaginous covering of the wool, as it is called, with which nature has furnished the wool, thus at once injuring the fibres and lowering the health of the sheep.

The composition now offered is free from these objections and possesses the following advantages—
I. It is soluble in water and easy of application.
II. It can be used without the slightest danger to the sheep and lambs of any age. It will not injure the skin or growth of the person applying it.
III. It possesses remarkable healing and antiseptic properties, and prevents contagion from skin diseases.
IV. It improves the appearance and increases the growth of the wool.
V. It effectually destroys ticks, lice, and other vermin; as after its application the sheep are enabled to feed with comfort, and will consequently improve more rapidly in condition.
VI. It prevents the attack of the maggot fly.
VII. It is an effective cure for scab in sheep.

The composition is equally adapted for applying to sheep and lambs by DIPPING, POURING, AND SKEARING.
DIRECTIONS FOR USE.
DIPPING.
Take 10 lbs. of the composition and dissolve it by boiling for two or three minutes in two gallons of water, stirring all the time, after which add forty-eight gallons of cold or (if convenient) tepid water, stirring the whole together. The dipping may then be commenced in the usual way, care being taken that every part is immersed, and that the sheep are not soiled. Each sheep should be kept in the bath a full minute.

On removing each sheep from the bath, allow it to remain on the drainers as long as possible on the wool.
When a number exceeding fifty are to be dipped, the bath is to be replenished after each twenty-five sheep with 5 lbs. of the composition boiled in one gallon of water, which twenty-four gallons of tepid or cold water are to be added.
THE PREPARATIONS ARE ONE POUND OF COMPOSITION TO TEN GALLONS OF WATER FOR FIVE SHEEP.

Parties assisting in dipping may handle the sheep in the bath with perfect safety, as this bath will not injure either their skin or wool. Five ounces is considered a fair application. No injury can occur to the sheep by using it in excess.

FOR HORSES AND CATTLE.
It is invaluable, as a salve for sores and wounds; it also cures, destroys lice, and has a healing power, and protects the sore from flies and insects. It is admirably adapted to protect horses and cattle from flies whilst at pasture.
For further particulars, apply to L. and S. SAMUEL, Spring-street.

EXTENSIVE DAIRY FARM. including, amongst other rich lands, the well-known alluvial vale of THURGOOD'S CLOVER ISLAND, the whole comprising 2400 acres, or thereabouts, situated on the high road from Moruya to the Gulf shingle; bounded on one side by the navigable waters of the Turoon, and distant only 12 miles from a sea communication with Sydney by the Moruya.

Upon the property are all necessary buildings for dairy and farm purposes, with cottages, garden, and orchard, and extensive subdivisions in paddocks.

There is no property in the colony with greater advantages than this; and any person possessing a reasonable capital, and having a knowledge of dairy and agricultural farming, may realize a very handsome return for his labour and outlay.

To a really responsible tenant the whole would be let at a very moderate rental, subject to an agreed advance so soon as the establishment of steam communication with the property is accomplished.

Further particulars may be learned upon application to the proprietor, Mr. T. S. MORT, addressed to the post town, Bodalla, which adjoins the farm.

SECOND AUCTION SALE.

MAGNIFICENT ALLUVIAL FARMS, LOWER HUNTER.
PART OF THE CELEBRATED MIDNEY ESTATE, between Morpeth and Raymond Terraces.

TITLE.—Unquestionable. For particulars apply to Messrs. Ward and Rids, solicitors, Pitt-street.

TERMS.—One-third cash; residue, one and two years.

MORT and CO. have been instructed by the proprietor, who is proceeding to England, to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on WEDNESDAY, 13th May, at 11 o'clock, TWENTY FARMS OF RICH CLEARED LAND, varying in extent from 20 to 40 acres each, forming portions of the Midney Estate, upon the whole of which are FARM BUILDINGS AND OTHER IMPROVEMENTS.

This beautiful estate is situated in the most fertile part of the Hunter district.

RAYMOND TERRACE AND MORPETH. Opposite to Oysterbay, and adjoining Dandenell, the property of JOHN RALPH, Esq. it consists entirely of the very finest alluvial land, suitable for growing

LUCERNE, MAIZE, SUGAR CANE, TOBACCO, COTTON, AND THE VINE.

It is so well adapted for the very best and most productive culture in the colony, that every one who is in the least conversant with the land, will be fully satisfied that the lands of THE LOWER HUNTER ALONE CAN BE DEPEND UPON for the production of the most superior crops of DURING OUR AUSTRALIAN DRUGGETS.

It has been proved that every acre of this land in this district will net the owner at least £40 for the season, with hay at only 25 per ton. The lands of this estate are now let at a yearly rental of from thirty shillings to three pounds per acre, and it may be confidently expected that they will rise in value to that extent within the next ten years.

THE LANDS ARE INEXHAUSTIBLE, and with the soil on one side and the Hunter River on the other, it would be impossible to find any other farms with superior facilities for the transportation of every description of produce to market. The development of the natural resources of the Hunter District may even now be said to be but in its infancy, and the vast extension within the past year of the coal-mining industry, and the consequent accession to the population, as well as the great increase in the shipping and export trade, leave very little room for doubt that the lands of the Lower Hunter will hereafter rank among the most valuable in the colony, not even excepting the suburbs of Sydney.

Large plan on view at the Rooms, Pitt-street, where every information may be obtained.

FOR POSITIVE SALE.

TOWN OF EMU.

That first-class well-known Country Hotel.

SITUATED in the Western Road, crossing Emu Plains, now in full trade, and transacting a very extensive and profitable business.

Title, unquestionable.

Terms, liberal.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from MR. HENRY HALL, of Emu Plains, to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, Sydney, on MONDAY, the 1st of June next, at 11 o'clock.

The above valuable country business premises, THE EMU INN and outbuildings occupy TWO ACRES OF LAND in the best and most central position of the TOWN OF EMU, being lots Nos. 1, 18, 19, and 20 of the Government subdivision—containing half an acre each—and forming ONE BLOCK, bounded on the south by Emu-street, or GREAT WESTERN ROAD TO BATHURST, on the north by Jamieson-street, on the east by Brookman-street, and on the west by adjoining allotment.

The PREMISES are substantially built of brick on stone foundations, two stories high, and contain large bar and parlour, three parlours, eight bedrooms, and a large stone cellar in the basement.

The OUTBUILDINGS comprise detached kitchen, two stables and coach-house, good store, with granary over, corn bins, &c., &c.

On allotment No. 20 is a good garden and orchard, well stocked with fruit trees, and 18 and 19 are four stockyards, well adapted for the receipt and drafting of cattle, this house being one of the recognised places for delivery of fat cattle coming from the westward.

* * The EMU INN is now let to MR. H. WOOD, at the rate of £150 per annum, which lease expires on the 30th June, 1864; but for many years after that date this inn, from its position in the middle of the principal works in connection with the extension of the railway to Bathurst, cannot fail to be one of the most profitable houses on the western side of the NEPEAN RIVER.

The bringing this property into the market for positive sale, RICHARDSON and WRENCH think it scarcely necessary to add any lengthy comment to the above brief outline of its description, as it is not to be seen to one that with the enormous expenditure for railway works, which will continue for years, apart from the richness of the Emu Plains land for agricultural and grazing purposes, a very large population must be gathered and remain in the immediate vicinity of the Emu Inn, and consequently, the ordinary management on the part of the owner of this property must result in a handsome fortune being realized in a short time. The present business is increased tenfold by the fact, and the property is put in execution. To competent persons no sure fortune could be offered that the present and prospective value of this property, and the attention of which is particularly directed to its sale.
